

RE: THE EVOLUTION OF NATURAL TALENT - T.E.N.T

As a community project developer and environmentalist, my interests are in encouraging best practices to this end and any community based projects that help, support and cultivate this ideology to manifest, are to be aided at all levels so as to reach as wide an audience as possible because the end of such endeavors benefits all. These are the reasons that have informed my support and recommendation of TENT.

Having been aware of TENT, on and off, for the past eight years, I am very confident in their delivery of successful projects, in and around the inner-city neighborhoods in London and also outside in the countryside. TENT is a hands-on learning experience. Zawadi, with her well of talent gained through years of practice, experiences and travel, covering most of the five continents. With Zawadi at the helm, having had the vision very early in her life, TENT continues to break barriers and pushes the envelope further still. For her innovative ideas, she has won various awards including BFIIN (British Female Innovators and Inventions Network) and other awards within the community.

Zawadi guides participants into simpler but affordable living by Reducing, Recycling and Re-using. Introducing these methods can be fun as it is a creative way of learning; sharing lessens burdens and, as negative impact on the environment decreases, healthier living manifests and general well-being obtained.

Zawadi has hit upon the secret of life - spirituality - inherent in all of us, of respect for self (in all aspects) and respect for the environment (all we share within it) and most of all respect for others especially those that have less; the disadvantaged and vulnerable.

Times past, societies and communities all over the globe used to run on these same principles and it's time we woke up and revised our ways and TENT is one of the leaders in this reversionary movement.

I hope that you will take the time to discover what it is that gets us all excited about TENT!
